

Transportation Commission approves stimulus projects

Federal stimulus money headed to South Carolina for highway and bridge projects totals $463 million. So far, state transportation officials have released $200 million of that total for “shovel-ready” projects, including $100 million for resurfacing projects.

Greenville County is slated to receive $5.26 million, the highest allotment. McCormick County will receive the least with its $802,899 allotment, according to the Transportation Commission report.

Shovel-ready refers to projects for which engineering, permits and other preliminary work has been completed or will be within 120 days, the department said.

Transportation Department engineers have identified roads to be resurfaced in all of the state’s counties. Before moving ahead, those projects are subject to a 30-day comment period.
